Small businesses have access to comprehensive and affordable computer maintenance, monitoring, security, and backup services

Union, N.J. (July 16, 2010) - Small businesses in the Summit, Union and Mountainside areas that have struggled to find quality IT support now have a professional, affordable option that gives them all the benefits of a full-time information technology staff at a significantly lower cost. Cecil Cates recently launched CMIT Solutions of Northern Union County to provide enterprise IT support to the local small business community.

CMIT Solutions of Northern Union County offers a full range of preventative computer maintenance and monitoring services that can help avert costly, large-scale emergencies.

"Smaller businesses need the same tools and support that large enterprises need - just on a different scale," explains Cates. "They need that same assurance that their systems are being watched around the clock, that we're taking every measure we can to protect confidential business data from viruses, spyware, hackers, and system failures. And smaller businesses need the same expert advice and problem-solving approach that big businesses get from high-dollar consultants. CMIT Solutions can provide that expertise and customized service at a price that fits small business budgets."

Cates is a technology executive with a 25-year track record of helping businesses use technology to more effectively deliver their products or services. His professional experience includes working for companies such as AT&T, Lucent Technologies and Tyco International. As soon as the local small business community heard that Cates was launching CMIT Solutions locally, they instantly expressed interest in utilizing his business' services. His first customer, Joyce Dudley, President of Dudley Hamilton Associates Inc., has already seen the benefit of working with CMIT Solutions. Cates' business saved the day for Dudley Hamilton Associates Inc., when it nearly lost ownership of its business' website. Cates' team was able to quickly find the problem without sacrificing visibility of the business on the Internet and business productivity.

In addition to providing IT support services, CMIT Solutions also offers local small business owners and residents free monthly online webinars on topics such as "Email for small business - Hosted or In-house," "Getting to the bottom of Google's Free Tools" and more.
